Oregon State University’s Graduate Certificate in Urban Forestry prepares you to think scientifically and strategically as you address critical urban natural resource issues. Oregon State is America’s natural resources university and offers this graduate certificate program online through OSU Ecampus.

PROGRAM OVERVIEW
This one-of-a-kind program delivers a graduate urban forestry education online. You will learn to apply the principles of urban forestry, green infrastructure, policy, planning and leadership to the management of city forests.

ADVANCE YOUR CAREER
Whether you are a technical field specialist or a program manager, this certificate will enhance your professional development and career options.

PROGRAM CURRICULUM
This is an 18- to 20-credit graduate certificate program, at the completion of which you will receive transferable, graduate-level university credits and a certificate. The credits can serve as a foundation for OSU’s Master of Natural Resources degree online. The program includes courses in the following areas:

• Required: Urban Forest Planning, Policy and Management; Sustainable Natural Resource Development; Green Infrastructure; and Urban Forestry Leadership
• Electives: Arboriculture; Ecosystem Services; Managing at the Wildland-Urban Interface; and many more.
• Capstone project: Non-thesis outreach project designed in cooperation with your adviser
